After a short break for tea, the first Technical session (Technical session A) of the program was started by the awaited lecture of Prof. P. Deb on the topic “Introduction to the Intellectual Property rights”. In his one hour lecture he started from the basic of the IPRs with some of the day today examples. Keeping in mind about the presence of mostly students as the participants, he explained in details about the characteristics of the all IPs such as Patents, copyrights, design, trademarks, Geographical Indications (GI) etc. He also explained how these intangible assets of one’s creativities and efforts can be managed and protected The students present in the program were highly influenced by the lecture of Prof. Deb and they interacted with him after his lecture.

The second technical session (Technical session B) was started right after the first lecture and it was delivered by Dr. Juri Borbora Saikia, Research Assistant, IPR Cell, Tezpur University on the topic Geographical Indications and its Implication in Communities. She started her lecture with some of very interesting examples of GIs that are usually familiar to the students (not knowing about their GIs). Then she entered to the main subject of her lecture and presented how important is the registration of GI for a local product to claim its uniqueness and inherent quality. She also elaborated in details how from GI registration a group or community of people can make profit. The example of ‘Darjeeling Tea’, ‘Boka Saul’, ‘Bhut jolokiya’ and Muga-silk were highlighted in her talk. The precipitants showed enormous interest in her lecture and interacted with her with some good

The third session (Technical session C) was presented by Dr. Koushik Saikia, Research Assistant, IPR Cell, Tezpur University on the topic IP management. In his lecture, he specifically talked about the patent application process in India and how IPR Cell, Tezpur University provides assistance in this regard. He started with the definition of journal publication and then introduced ‘patent’ to the student participants by stating their differences. Dr. Saikia also mentioned about the role of IPR cell and the financial and technical helps of the DPIIT, NRDC and TIFAC etc. in their activities. He concluded his lecture by encouraging the participants to become creative and enthusiastic towards the protections of their own IPs.
