REPORT:

Terms papers usually require mutual work on both the part of the supervisor and the supervised. While the pandemic posed a challenge in reaching out to students, a WhatsApp Group allowed easy and fast accessibility. It enabled the instructor to be in touch with the allotted students and offer advice as to how to write the term paper.

The students were encourage to find their own topics. The supervisor helped to refine and develop the topics. Topics having relevance to the current situation were encouraged. Thus one student wrote her term paper on “Diagnosing Mind, Body and Fiction: Representation of Disease and Illness in Select Novels of Dickens, Woolf and Plath”.

Though the students did not have access to the university library in physical terms, e-books and e-journals were consulted and proved to be a boon. Overall, quality was not compromised despite the lack of in-person consultation and in-person classes. As in normal times, students submitted multiple drafts.

Report:

I am happy to state that the students I monitored during 2020-21 were extremely positive in handling the crisis that was created by the pandemic. They used all the modes of communications to keep in touch with their mentor. This enabled me to easily find out their problems and provide solutions. The problems I had identified were as below:

1. Since they had to stay home they were often diverted from their studies; to help their families during the crisis they had to struggle to find time for themselves.
 2. For a few who live in remote locations the network connection was unreliable, and this created panic.
 3. They missed the library and group discussions.
- So I had to contact them oftener than usual, to help them develop the skill of time management. I had also advised each student to be in touch with the rest in the group and to help each other. I had sent them reading materials and also suggested ways to improve their English. I had kept record of their SGPA so that I could note the improvement or the deterioration and approach each student accordingly

Report:

The students mentored during 2020-21 needed special attention, as they had to grapple with the pandemic and its social and psychological side effects, along with the new hybrid system of learning and evaluation. They had to be handled with empathy and a lot of practical support. During 2020 the concern for health was heavier, and so had to personally contact them to keep their spirits up. Patient explanations about the new admission processes, the online exams etc. were done. Along with these, the usual monitoring of their SGPA was done and suggestions for improvement given. Course materials to support learning were sent through mail. By 2021 they were already improving, not only in their studies but also in their handling of their everyday lives during the pandemic.

Report:

The group I had mentored during 2020-21 was a mixed group of two boys and three girls coming from different communities. They were sincere, though some of them had problems with the English language. Because of the pandemic the communication was mostly online, though I was able to conduct a few group meetings physically, after taking all precautionary measures. In the beginning (2020) some of them were depressed, as they suffered because of network problems and they could not use the library. I had to supply them with reading materials, often scanning from books. There were also issues related to family matters, covid infections etc. and I had to talk to them over the phone. During 2021 they began mailing their topics for their term paper as well as the abstracts. I corrected them and sent them back along with notes and suggestions. I kept checking their SGPA and asked them about their problems with particular papers in order to help solve them.

MENTORING REPORT

Academic Mentoring: Six (06) students were placed under me for academic mentoring in the year 2020-21. This was in the beginning of Autumn 2020. The Covid 19 pandemic was raging around the world and our students were also affected by it. Classes were being held online and students were attending these classes from homes situated around the country.

These 06 students were placed under my guidance to work on a Term Paper each for submission in their final semester in Spring, 2021. The process began in Autumn with selection of topics and texts to be worked on. Each of the mentee is required to select the topic and texts themselves. As a mentor, guidance was provided in

- Selection of topics and texts
- Writing the abstract
- Preparing the outline of the paper
- Sharing of Reading material
- Checking the draft
- Preparing for final submission to the department

Apart from academic mentoring, I also provided non-academic mentoring to these students on how to cope with the stress and anxiety of facing the pandemic. In the most heart breaking manner a student in my mentoring group lost both her uncle and her father in the span of two semesters.

Non-Academic Mentoring: I was also approached by students outside the mentorship group to share their fear, anxiety and feeling of uncertainty that arose because of the Covid 19 pandemic. Some of them had sick family members who were fighting different illnesses including Covid 19. Space was provided for them to safely communicate their anxieties and also at times to vent their anger. The “Lockdown” and being confined to their homes took a toll on the mental health of some of the students. Many were worried about their future career. Whenever required the students were referred to expert counsellors to help them deal with their issues.

REPORT:

COVID posed a huge challenge in organising and reaching out to students particularly for the Term Paper. However, with all credit to the students, we managed to form a small, active collective to plan and execute the Research paper. We formed a WhatsApp Group which allowed easy and fast accessibility to all students and faculty member alike. This also enabled me to address their doubts immediately.

I instructed the students and asked them about their preferences in terms of reading and genres they were inclined towards. It was also fruitful to allow them to choose from their preferred period, or from popular literature or any literature of their choice. Once, the choices were made, I asked them to go through the text of their study and identify, thematically, what interested them about the text. These discussions took place at times telephonically, through email and even through WhatsApp. Students were also instructed to write an Abstract which would be the outline of their paper.

Once, their abstracts were approved they were expected to begin writing the Term Paper with adequate illustrations from the text to support each and every argument/claim they made. The drafts were revised multiple times and finally submitted.

Since the pandemic created an unprecedented situation and teaching-learning in a face-to-face classroom was affected, therefore, students were provided help and advice through virtual platforms, including online classes, Emails, phone calls and WhatsApp messaging. The students were advised regarding selection of research and term paper topics, and other academic queries. Counselling was also offered to the students as and when the need arose. The mentees were asked to focus on their strengths and work on their weaknesses. Since stress during this situation is a given, mentees were advised to pay attention to their mental health too.

Report

The onset of the pandemic caused a paradigm shift in the teaching-learning process in class: with some hiccups it shifted to the virtual online mode. Rules were reset and 24x7 online became the mode. Students, stuck at home and without the healthy interaction normal in the university grudgingly accepted the new normal. Extra care was taken albeit by the process of mentoring. Personal counselling were attempted. Gazing at the screen often caused stress. They would, more often than not, switch off the video. They complained of swollen eyes and weak network. However, some of them did try their best.

Report

I had in my group both weak and strong students. I had to counsel the weaker ones almost everyday. We had to keep the system ticking in the virtual mode. This sudden shift demanded extra effort from the mentor. I used all the mediums of communication -- the phone, the whatsapp, and the email. When some of them complained of weak network, I had to record my counselling in the phone and send via whatsapp. I tried to help them with study materials and also suggested topics for their term papers. While they wrote their term papers, I had also counseled them on the rules of academic writing from the MLA Handbook. During 2020 the fear of pandemic had distracted them, and I had to check on their health every week. By 2021 they were quite comfortable with the system, and being the more phone savvy, some of them could outsmart the teacher. This was a new problem, especially during exams.
