

Energy Management and Renewable Energy Intervention for Industrial Drying

(A course under Global Initiative of Academic Networks (GIAN))

Course Code: 154016B03

Overview

Drying is the most common, and perhaps the oldest operation of thermal removal of water, and is common to almost all industries. There is a direct correlation between the amount of water thermally removed in industrial operations and the GDP of the country. Thus, as the developing economies of the world raise their GDPs there is an increase in the energy needs for drying and the resulting increase in environmental concerns.

Estimates of energy consumption for industrial drying in the developed countries range from 11% (e.g., Canada, France, Sweden, USA) to more than 20% (e.g., Denmark, Germany). Most of this energy comes from combustion of fossil fuels. Most industrial dryers operate at thermal efficiencies ranging from a low of 20% to 80% with a median value of about 50%. Consumption of large amounts of energy in drying - both thermal and electrical - leading to high emission of greenhouse gases as a result of fossil fuel consumption has triggered the development of new sustainable technologies with the use of renewable energies. The scheduled course aims at giving an exposure to the issues and progresses in the field, and providing updated knowledge to equip to address the emerging need of evolving, adopting and implementing energy smart industrial drying practices.

Major topics to be covered

- Industrial drying systems
- Advances in drying process analysis
- Processes of drying of paper and pulp, tea, low rank coals and biomass
- Energy assessment for typical industrial drying practices
- Waste heat recovery for drying
- Drying practices based on solar energy and energy from biomass
- Opportunities and challenges of renewable energy application in drying operations
- Economic and Environmental analysis of renewable energy applications in drying operations
